

SIDE SCENES OF THE CITY.

RANDOM SKETCHES DRAWN BY "EVENING WORLD" REPORTERS.

Ingenuous Sergt. Price and His Police Snoring Match.

Sergt. James K. Price, the wag of the force, has started an entirely novel movement, and is receiving ample support in furnishing to the public a wonderful show.

His entertainment has taken the shape of a National snoring match, and will introduce the finest sleepers of the finest police force. (Globe Hall) has been chosen as the scene of the contest, because the Sergeant fears that the roof will be lifted. The orchestra will be made up of twenty bass-drum performers, the terms of the contract being that they will make noise enough to prevent the peace of the neighborhood from being broken by the terrific notes of the snorers.

There is no provision in the contracts which makes Price responsible for broken drums, either of skin or ears.

J. J. Coogan, the United Labor candidate for Mayor, has donated fifty folding-beds for the use of sleepers, every bed being warranted to contain at least ten snorers to the square inch.

Price has selected the watch to be used by Timeskeeper Eddie Plummer. It winds as loud as a ferry-wheel and ticks like a trip-hammer.

Entries are coming in very rapidly, some of them being as follows:

Capt. Allaire enters Happy Fellow George Hopcroft, who on one election night fell asleep and snored so loudly that he cracked the ceiling in Kipp's room.

Sergt. Price enters Bar-Foot Sergt. Schmittberger, of Mount Hope, with a record and pedigree for nasal night noises.

Sergt. O'Toole enters Liliputian Doorman Barnes, whose snoring has driven every lair from his head.

Inspector Williams enters Mayor Hewitt, with a record of 92½ out of a possible 90 per cent. His entry is said to have been compelled to put tankard between the floors of his house to keep the patrolmen on the post from arousing the household to warn them of a suspected dynamite explosion. Hewitt, it is alleged, talks in his sleep.

Sergt. Harley enters quiescent Doorman Fitzpatrick, small in stature but mighty in snore. The boast of Andrew is that he can keep any neighborhood awake.

Sergt. Kass enters Capt. Brooks, who was assigned to Morrisania so he might have plenty of vacant lots to send his midnight notes along. He awakes with a snort similar to forty steam engines and Price declares.

Sergt. Bird enters Sergt. Taylor, of the Steamboat Squad, a sleeper whose noises have frequently been mistaken for the sunset gun at the Navy-Yard.

The admission fee will be 50 cents, and the entrance fee 10 cents, the entire proceeds to go in the Corn Relief Fund of the Web-Foster Steamboat Squad.

Price invites entries from every precinct until Nov. 15.

Slender Waists Are Now Wrapped in Spiked Dog-Collars.

Now that it is the correct thing for the girl of the period to have a waist the size of a baby's head a peculiar fad is becoming the vogue with them.

One of those wasp-waisted girls secures a shape out would shudder to reproduce in a nude marble statue, it would be such a type of feminine monstrosity. But it is an easy thing for one of them to get one of these large-sized dog-collars around their attenuated waists, and that is what a good many of them do now.

The massive leather collar studded with huge spikes of brass makes a belt for a belle, and her slender waist looks smaller than ever.

A dealer who makes a specialty of the trappings for ladies' canine pets told The Evening World reporter that it was a common thing for them to get these collars for belts. Where they are a little too robust to get into even the largest size of dog-collar they have one made to order to fit them.

Two Old Churchyards That Attract Many Visitors.

Be it Winter or Summer, there are always any number of people to be found wandering around among the tombstones in the churchyards of Old Trinity or St. Paul's.

Strangers from all parts of the Union, from big cities and from country farm-houses, have read of these old burying-grounds, and almost the first place they visit, after the Brooklyn Bridge, is one of these cemeteries.

They walk around and examine the stones, read the inscriptions and compare the dates to those when some near relative or friend changed this world for the unknown.

In St. Paul's, the Memorials to Gen. Montgomery and Robert Emmet seem to attract the visitor's attention the most.

MANAGER EDWARDS MADE HAPPY.

On His Thirty-third Birthday He Received Many Valuable Tokens of Regard.

W. A. Edwards, the manager of H. H. Jacobs' Third Avenue Theatre, is a proud man now.

Monday was his thirty-third birthday, although no one would take him to be more than twenty-five, and on that evening during the performance of the "Lights of London" the audience called Mr. Edwards before the curtain, and he was presented with a silver cigar cutter, a gold watch and a handsome and costly pair of diamond sleeve buttons.

Speeches were called on all sides, but the recipient was so overcome that he could say nothing other than to invite his friends to meet him after the event.

After the performance many of the manager's friends sat down to a bounteous repast, at which the entire company was present, and the festivities were kept up all night.

Manager Edwards' pretty and talented wife, who takes part in the "Lights of London," was present.

A LETTER FROM A DOG.

"The Evening World" Puppy Would Be Delighted to See Him.

To the Editor of The Evening World:

I am a dog—just a plain, ordinary dog—and as the people I live with are constant readers of The Evening World, I, of course, have heard about your paper and also of your dog, whose acquaintance I would like to make.

I am not a homely dog, for I come of good parents and have been well brought up and taught politeness. I am a Skye terrier, am about middle height. People say I am nice-looking, and if Miss Puss would receive me I would be delighted if I could call and if I knew she would receive a gentleman dog, which I am. Hoping this will find her in good health, I remain,

NEWS AND NOTES DRAMATIC.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO PLAYER, MANAGER AND THEATRE-GOER.

Coquelin Scores Another Triumph at Palmer's—"She" Was Not a Bright and Charming Success as Presented in England—Lord Chamley's Gastronomic Favors—Chit-Chat of the Theatre.

"Tartuffe," Moliere's rather lugubrious satire, was produced at Palmer's Theatre last night, with Coquelin as the arrant hypocrite. Although this work is looked upon as a classic, and would not be very sure of an audience in France, its performance last night was watched with keenest interest by a miscellaneous American gathering. Coquelin has not yet shown us anything but the perfection of acting, and last night he added another triumph to his list. In the hands of an inexperienced actor Tartuffe would be repulsive and the play ultra-gloomy. But Coquelin invested the part with his own peculiar charm. With him Tartuffe was more curious than disgusting. His cant, accompanied by the great actor's inimitable facial expression was amusing; his wrath so aptly shown that it almost called forth sympathy. Moliere's blank verse from Coquelin's mouth was delightfully musical. The scenes with Elmire were wonderfully well done. The audience listened, breathlessly interested. How the Parisians would smile at the idea of an American sitting spellbound at the performance of one of Moliere's comedies! Miss Patry, who has proved herself worthy of the high position she holds in this admirably selected company, was dignified and forcible as Elmire, a rather thankless role. Miss Jenny Howe, as Dorine, did some good work. Jean Coquelin played the small part of Valere.

E. H. Sothern is being gastronomically tortured at the present time, but he likes it. Last Thursday, after the performance of "Lord Chumley," Mr. Sothern was entertained by Mrs. Langtry at Delmonico's. She gave him a dainty supper. On Saturday and Sunday he was feted by personal friends.

H. Clay Miner is again contemplating. It will be remembered that Mr. Miner is occasionally given to contemplation. This time it is as to the advisability of putting up a new theatre in Harlem.

Sydney is the name of the stage director who came from England to produce "The Bells of Hadenham" in Boston, and who, while here, is said to have seen a performance of "She," and went back to England heavily freighted with Gillette's ideas for the benefit of Miss Sophie Eyre. Gillette's stage manager, Mr. Coventry, returned from the other side on Sunday. He had plenty to say about the London production of "She." He said that it was not properly handled over there, and was worse after the first month than on the first night. Mr. Coventry says that the English production was made without music, though in this country one of the specialties was the weird chant of the Ambaggor maidens. When the idea of presenting "She" in England was first evolved, Miss Eyre and her manager offered to combine with Gillette and Hayman in making one big production in London. They, however, refused to use Gillette's version, and that ended the matter.

James Carson, the prospective husband of Miss Maud Harrison, is now "figuring" with Messrs. French and Sanger as to the advisability of producing "The Bells of Hadenham" in November at the Columbia Theatre, Chicago. Mr. Carson goes home Friday night. Miss Harrison also goes to Chicago to join the Madison Square company, at present playing at the Chicago Opera-House, the Columbia Theatre's rival. Miss Harrison will appear in her original part in "Our Society," which is to be given there next week. It is thought that her reappearance in Chicago will be a "society" event.
